I have always had a soft spot for the field of accounting from the moment I started to contemplate about the academic programs and career path, which I ought to pursue in the future. I must admit that my interest in accounting has long been fueled by the love I have for subjects, which revolve around solving complex problems. I can specifically single out the study of mathematics, a course that I personally consider to be the foundation of developing concrete critical thinking, problem solving, and decision-making skills. Therefore, I can assert that my love for math is one of the major factors that convinced me to apply for the graduate accounting program at your esteemed higher learning institution considering that mathematics is one of the core subjects of the proposed accounting major.

I consider myself to be among the most qualified applicants who should be allowed to enroll for this graduate academic program because I have previously undertaken many accounting courses and topics during my college years. For instance, I take pride in the fact that I have had an opportunity to study cost accounting, a topic that is widely regarded as one of the pillars of the field of managerial accounting. Other important aspects of accounting that I got a chance to learn include: principles of accounting, accounting standards and procedures, financial reporting, and intermediate accounting. Considering that most of these courses provide the foundation of the study of accounting at a graduate level, I am confident that I will be able to adopt a more practical learning approach, as opposed to a theoretical one, while undertaking all my academic activities.

On the other hand, there are a number of important academic interests and goals I intend to focus on if given the opportunity to enroll for the proposed accounting program at your university. To begin with, I hope to take advantage of the course to enhance my understanding of recently-enacted regulations and provisions, which impact the way accountants carryout their duties and responsibilities. The events surrounding the recent global financial crisis served as a wakening call for different regulatory authorities to adopt stringent accounting provisions as a way of enhancing the stability of the global financial system. For instance, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, has in recent years, introduced new reporting standards and procedures meant to ensure that all American corporations prepare accurate and reliable financial statements.

Therefore, pursuing the graduate accounting program at this moment of my life is of great significance because this move will create a concrete platform for me to gain extensive knowledge of the current trends pertaining to the regulation of the field of accounting. For instance, I intend to rely on the course to gain an insight of the recent changes revolving around the issue of accounting for revenue recognition. I am confident that this will subsequently shed more light on how the proposed convergence between GAAP and IFRS will have an impact on how business entities record and account for different revenue items in their financial statements. I will also direct a lot of efforts towards familiarizing myself with the application of these new accounting rules and standards, as aspect that tends to dictate the ability of accountants to comply with existing standards and procedures, while undertaking financial reporting activities.

In addition to this, I am interested in taking advantage of this program to get more enlightened about how accounting can be used as an effective planning and decision making tool. Factors such as rapid globalization and technological advancements have contributed to the global business environment becoming more competitive and dynamic than ever before. This has in turn increased the need for business entities to always make accurate and reliable decisions pertaining to various aspects of their operations considering that failure to do this may end up impacting negatively on their level of competitiveness in both domestic and foreign markets.

Accountants play an important role in the achievement of this object bearing in mind the fact that they are normally tasked with the responsibility of collecting the data that assist the management to compare different business choices and propositions.

It is for this reason that I am fully focused on relying on the proposed accounting program to learn more about ways of analyzing financial statements and reports using different tools such as financial ratios. I am confident that by building on the knowledge immersed, while undertaking various accounting courses while in college, I will enhance my ability to review the four major types of financial statements, in order to generate information that can be used by the management to plan for future operations. The thought of studying different capital budgeting techniques also fascinates me a lot considering that it would be a revelation for me to also fully grasp the art of selecting the most profitable and viable investment projects.

The description of the interests I intend to pursue after enrolling for this masters degree cannot be regarded as complete if I fail to acknowledge the fact that the desire to gain a better understanding of the world of corporate business is also a major motivational factor in my quest to venture into this academic program. For instance, I intend to direct a lot of efforts towards ascertaining how changes in the global economy end up impacting on the operations of different companies, markets, and industries. Of particular interest will be unearthing the reasons as to why the prices of assets and financial instruments fluctuate when the economy is experiencing a recession or a boom. I can thus conclude that enrolling for the graduate accounting program will prove to be of great significance in enabling me to develop a more-informed perspective of the corporate business world.

Upon graduating from your university, my short-term goal will be to sit for a CPA exam. Becoming a Certified Public Accountant will be a coronation of my long academic journey since this qualification is widely regarded as the highest educational achievement in the field of accounting. However, I am fully aware of the fact that qualifying for and passing a CPA exam normally tends to be a product of extensive reading and preparation. This gives a candid explanation as to I am determined to enroll for this graduate accounting degree bearing in mind the fact that this program will enable me to gain the minimum credits and qualifications needed by those wishing to sit for CPA exam. Most importantly, the graduate course will help me acquire an in-depth background of different CPA exam-targeted fields such as taxation, auditing, and international financial reporting.

On the other hand, my long-term goal is to secure a well paying accounting job in reputable and well established accounting company. I would be more thrilled to first work in U.S. bearing in mind the fact that the country is widely regarded as the center of global financial activities and regulations. I strongly believe that working in such challenging and demanding environment would fast track my practical application of the knowledge, skills, and competencies acquired in class. Moreover, I am convinced that working as an accountant in the country will enable me to develop a better understanding of the utilization of different accounting software and technologies. This is largely due to the fact that many American corporations are increasingly embracing the idea of using modern accounting systems to gain a sustainable competitive advantage.

Therefore, it goes without saying that joining your university in order to pursue the graduate accounting degree will be like a dream come true for me considering that this academic program will push me closer to realizing my long-held educational goals and professional aspirations. To begin with, the major will make it possible for me to learn more about the "language" through which companies best communicate with their stakeholders, as well as the art of undertaking successful and ethical financial reporting practices. Moreover, the course will equip me with a wide range of valuable knowledge and skills, which I can later rely on while purporting my future accounting professional endeavors. Lastly, I strongly believe that the proposed degree program will set me on the path of becoming a Certified Public Accountant. This will subsequently turn my dream of working as the Chief Accounting/Financial Officer in one of the Fortune 500 companies into a reality.
